In the past, the expectation was pretty clear. Jeans or khakis for work. I've become more flexible on purpose. We work with kids all day. We are on the floor, lifting, moving, and sometimes stiff jeans just are not realistic. Comfort absolutely matters here, and I want you to be able to move and feel good during the day.

That said, there is still a line. We need to be comfortable and presentable.

Comfortable does not mean loungewear. I have cute loungewear. The kind I wear around the house or even out to Dollar General. But it is not something I would wear to work, and that is the difference. If it looks like something you would wear to relax at home or binge a show, it is probably not meant for the classroom.

Stretchy or softer fabrics are totally fine. It is really about how you pull the outfit together and whether it looks professional.

We work with kids, but we are still professionals and how we present ourselves helps families feel confident in the care we provide. PROMISE

Here are just some ideas of comfy but professional looking pants.
